

ABSTRACT

A method for providing wireless communication between a mobile station and a network station using a context for message compression is provided. Profile-specific information is stored persistently in a profile-specific dictionary. Communication is then 5 provided between the mobile station and the network station using the profile-specific dictionary for message compression.

10024412-121701